PRIZE BIG FAMILY OF N. Y. IN EVENING WORLD CONTEST WINS HELP OF PRESIDENT

Harding Writes to Wanamaker Asking Better
Job for Father of 19, and Employer
Probably Will Grant Request.

Mrs. Domenico Zaccaria, mother of nineteen children, will subscribe to the assertion that luck has something to do with effort—also that one stroke of luck calls for another.

When she had won a $100 prize from The Evening World for having the largest family of children born within the limits of the Greater City who thought herself the luckiest of women and declared that the money would "buy shoes for the whole family."

She had no idea that in addition to the shoes she would receive the personal attention of the President of the United States and that he would take time from the affairs of the Nation to use his good offices in her behalf.

But that is what has happened. President Harding, who believes that one of the important interests of the Nation is to encourage the rearing of big families of good Americans, has written not one letter but two in behalf of the Zaccaria family. The first was a personal letter to the mother, congratulating her. The second was to John Wanamaker, who is the employer of the head of the Zaccaria family, asking Mr. Wanamaker to give Zaccaria a better job so that he can earn more than $20. And Mr. Wanamaker has virtually promised to do it.

The Evening World some months ago conducted a contest offering the prize. Hundreds of letters were received. Mrs. Zaccaria sat down late one evening, after her huge family had gone to bed, after the mountain of supper dishes had been washed and put away, and wrote her letter, a simple statement of the facts about her family. She won, and the photograph of her family was published by The Evening World. Later it was published by other newspapers, finally in the rotogravure section of a Sunday newspaper, which caught the eye of the President in the White House. He wrote her this letter:

"My Dear Mrs. Zaccaria:
I noticed in the rotogravure section of one of the Sunday papers a

might be possible to find a way "of helping this somewhat notable family," although he explained that he knew nothing whatever of the merits of the particular case.

Mr. Wanamaker replied that Zaccaria spoke very little English, that he had been employed two years and was earning two dollars a week more than others doing similar work. He promised, however, to advance him, if that could be done, and also to find a job for one of the sixteen children, a son twenty-two years old, described "as tall and strong as his father."

There are sixteen living children in the Zaccaria family, all unmarried, all living at home, all gathered at dinner time around one huge table in the front room, all fed from the little kitchen where Mrs. Zaccaria works like a restaurant cook.

Their apartment at No. 419 East 9th St. cost them only $15 a month when they first moved into it eleven years ago, but now it costs them $40 a month—half of the earnings of the head of the family.

Zaccaria and his wife were both born in Italy, in adjoining provinces, but they did not meet until both had come to America. They were married Aug. 9, 1898, in the Church of Our Lady of Loretto, in Elizabeth Street, between Houston and Bleecker Streets, and went to live at No. 502 East 11th Street, where they lived until the family was so big that larger quarters became imperative.

Their first child was Nicola, who is now twenty-two. The others still living are Maria, twenty-one; Giuseppe, twenty; Antonetta, seventeen; Rosa, sixteen; Lucia, fifteen; Angelina, thirteen; Giovannina, eleven; Teysa, ten; Joacchino, nine; Michele, eight; Elena, six; Giovanni, five; Vincenzo, four; Rocco, three, and Nonnata, one.

The names of the three who died were passed on to those born later. They were Rosa, who would be nineteen now; Archangela, who would be fourteen, and Rocco, twin of Giovanni, who would be five.

They were Rosa, who would be nineteen now; Archangela, who would be fourteen, and Rocco, twin of Giovanni, who would be five.

"I gave birth to nineteen children, sixteen of whom are alive as their photograph is herein inclosed and I send it to you as my most precious possession."

"My husband and I are never discouraged of the great task before us, as the older ones help to support the younger, but one thing I regret that my husband's earning capacity is only $20 per week by John Wanamaker of this city."

"I am most respectfully yours."

"MRS. DOMENICO ZACCARIA"

In writing, Mr. Wanamaker, the President, inclosing a copy of Mrs. Zaccaria's appeal, said he hoped it might be possible to find a way "of helping this somewhat notable family," although he explained that he knew nothing whatever of the merits of the particular case.

MORGUE OFFERED TO N. Y. YACHT CLUB

City Would Rent It as Waiting Room to Clear Ferry Landing.

When the fine vessels of the New York Yacht Club are commissioned next summer and gather at the club station here, it may not be at the old rendezvous at the foot of East 23d Street, but three blocks north. And when the owners and guests arrive in their limousines to embark for a sail, their waiting room may be the old City Morgue.

For years the yachts at anchor off the station at 23d Street have interfered with the ferry boats there. They also have hindered to no little extent the use of the south slip of the 24th Street pier. The old red brick Morgue, built in 1898 and discontinued in 1917, when the new mortuary was built at 29th Street and First Avenue was vacant.

Dock Commissioner Hulbert suggested to the yacht club that it move over there, and recommended to the Sinking Fund a ten-year lease at $1,500 a year, with a 10 per cent. increase annually with each renewal. The Commissioners resolved that the property should be leased at $2,000 a year. George Cormack, Secretary of the club, is away on vacation and the matter is awaiting his return.

SWINDLE TRUST GOT SUGAR MEN'S THOUSANDS

Concern's Loss Said to Be Due to French-Worthington Group.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Stolen securities of the United States Sugar Manufacturers' Association of New York valued at thousands of dollars have been traced to the French-Worthington $20,000,000 group of alleged swindlers, according to Henry H. Rollap, President of the association, who is here to-day conferring with John V. Canning, Assistant United States District Attorney.

Federal agents to-day were attempting to trace securities and to determine the connection Charles W. French and Worthington had in their manipulation.
